

Free Ways to Spend Time in Paris

Contributed by paristravelguides.org

Paris is a world-renowned city and a great place to visit on a vacation. In this economy, one of the primary benefits to be realized is the cost. Besides the travel and lodging, a vacation in Paris can be otherwise cheap due to the vast amount of no-cost activities. Also, the transportation is cheap, so you can travel from place to place without spending a lot of money.

Since Paris is such a beautiful place, one could spend the whole time there just walking around and enjoying the scenery. There are stunning architectural pieces throughout the city, not to mention the Eiffel Tower. By walking the city on foot, you can learn what it really is like to live there, which is educational, entertaining, and a fantastic cultural experience.

Museums in Paris house some of the best art in the world. Although most museums normally charge an entrance fee, there usually is a day in the week where admittance is free. It is on these days that you should take advantage of the opportunity, and since different museums have different free admittance days, you can stay busy at no cost. Many venues are free all the time, such as galleries and parks. Just like with the city, you can experience a lot just by traversing these places and taking in the scenery.

Even if you are not religious, the churches of Paris are not to be missed out on. They are some of the most beautiful structures not only in France, but in the world. Many of the inhabitants of Paris still go to them for admiration and prayer. With all these things to do, you will find that it is quite easy not to spend anything in the city, although you probably will want to eat.
